Winter Time Bowfishing is firing on all cylinders!

Andrew Mack
Small Game Chair

As most hunting seasons come to an end and archery migrates back to targets at ranges and indoor competitions, there is still great hunting to be had for small game. The kind of game with gills and fins. That is bowfishing. While some lakes, like Big bear tend to be a little tough due to no more boats on the water. In some lakes and areas, this is the best time of year to stack some bigger fish. Continued, next page.

Continued from page 3 ~We live in such an awesome State that bowfishing is good 12 months out of the year...if you know where to look. It does take a lot of exploring and lots of driving miles, but once you figure out what times of year are most productive, you can stack fish all year long.

Anything attached to the Colorado River usually has lots of carp, and in these waters, that's where monsters lurk.

Just recently, I was able to stick an arrow into my largest carp to date, which weighed 32.2 pounds. But besides the big carp, there are still thousands roaming around.

You also have other spots like Lake Elsinore, Lake Isabella, and some San Diego Lakes that also hold fish year-round.

A few things to be successful this time of year, while some others claim there are no fish and their equipment is collecting dust. A good pair of polarized glasses is very important. Most carp hide in the murky water, but they are definitely in range and ready to eat arrows.

A slight wind gust can be your best friend as it makes it silent while you drift, and these fish stay shallower longer rather than bust out to where all you see is a dust cloud.

Team Rampage Outdoor, made up of Karen Imhoff and Don Augustine have also been stacking fish and filling by applying these methods. But they have also been putting in many hours on the water. Another thing that most don't realize is that fresh water is not the only area for bowfish.

The saltwater scene has also been very consistent with holding different species of fish as well. Most bays and Marinas are loaded with rays, sharks, and other game fish that also like to eat arrows as well. Typically, this is done at night under lights, so a decent boat set up with flood lights and a generator is a must.

To get into bowfishing, choose any standard compound bow or recurve, which can be used with a few add-ons to transform it into a bowfishing setup. You'll need a bowfishing reel, line, and a specific bowfishing arrow to which the line is attached. Cont. page 5

Catalina Islands Mule Deer

https://www.islapedia.com/images/1/1b/Deer\_in\_Avalon.png

California mule deer were introduced to Catalina Island in 1928, when a small group—one buck and two does—from Modoc County in Northern California was brought to the island. In 1930, additional deer, mostly fawns, were brought over from Los Angeles County and released on the island.

These introductions were carried out by wildlife officials, including the California Department of Fish and Game, as part of efforts at the time to establish game animals for sport hunting and tourism on Catalina Island.

The population historically ranged between 500 and 1,000 deer and occupied most of the island, but tended to be concentrated in the Bulrush, Middle Cap, and Cottonwood canyons. The population estimate in 2023 was approximately 2,000 deer.

The Catalina Island Conservancy has welcomed hunters as a conservation tool in managing the island's introduced mule deer population.

Wildlife West Inc. has served as the island's outfitter for many years and has provided hunting experiences to aid the Conservancy in its deer management objectives.

Resident deer hunters were required to take an antlerless doe first; if a second deer was taken, an antlerless deer was preferred.

In October 2023, plans emerged to eradicate the deer herd as part of a broader ecosystem restoration project, including a proposal to use sharpshooters from helicopters to eliminate the population. Due in part to public backlash, the Conservancy later dropped the helicopter sharpshooting proposal.

The Catalina Island Conservancy has publicly pursued a plan to efficiently remove the mule deer population, drawing significant attention and controversy as part of its efforts to protect the island's ecosystem.

Hunting permits have continued to be issued as part of population management, with up to 1,000 deer tags in 2024 and up to 200 tags in 2025, exclusively for island residents.

Check the Catalina Island Conservancy hunting permit page for the latest 2026 season details: <https://catalinaconservancy.org/resources/permits/hunting-permits>. As of now, the 2026 season information has not yet been posted. I'm gonna check out the 2026 mule deer hunting season on Catalina! How about you?

Continued from page 4~ For the most part is all you'll need. A fishing license is required to bowfish in California as well. Some good spots to check out, and get your set up for bowfishing are Riverside Archery, Turners outdoorsman that has an archery section, or Willow Creek Archery.

Willow Creek has also just recently sponsored Don and Karen, as well from Rampage Outdoors for bowfishing, so this duo is always willing to help anyone out and make sure to get them bowfishing ready. In the near future, we will all be hosting a few seminars on bowfishing so stay tuned.

Also I look forward to hosting the CBH Tilapia and Carp shoot down in the Blythe area, and the 2nd Annual Carp Quest Derby in Lake Elsinore. I hope to see everyone in the next few months at these events.

If anyone has any questions or would like more info about bowfishing, definitely reach out.

For the Love of Archery

Lori Raupe

If you're reading this, chances are you love archery. Not just the gear or the targets—but the feeling. The quiet focus. The steady breath. That moment when everything else fades away and it's just you, the bow, and the shot.

You have a passion for the sport, you want to beat you best. So here's the BIG question: why not share it?

We'd love for this newsletter to be filled with your stories—short reflections, meaningful moments, lessons learned, or even a simple “this is why I shoot.” Add a favorite photo or two from the range, the woods, a tournament, or your backyard practice spot, and you've got something powerful to share Stories connect us. They inspire beginners, remind seasoned archers why they started, and show the heart behind the sport. Your story might be the one that gets someone to pick up a bow for the first time—or fall back in love with archery all over again.

So how about it?

Take a few minutes today and write something up.

What do you love about archery?

Why does it matter to you?

What keeps you coming back?

You know, we can't wait to read it—and share it with others who love archery just as much as you do.
