Things Female Hunters Face

By Jen "The Archer" Cordaro

Females get a certain amount of attention in the hunting community that our male counterparts typically don't. Some of this attention is positive and some not. What strikes me as interesting is the attention females get from within our own community, not the attention from the anti-hunters. While I'm not going to speak to every type of attention that female hunters get (or even sometimes seek out), I do want to talk about a few things that females face that often go unaddressed. Take the following as a public service announcement filled with some level of sarcasm and comedy, but which is written in all seriousness. The information is coming from my own experiences and conversations that I have had with many female hunters.

I'm often asked to speak at events, and typically the topic is women hunters. When I ask for clarification and definitive discussion points, the usual response is something like: "Well, you know, talk to women about whatever they need to know about hunting."

Though I almost always accept these events, I find it hard to not respond with: "Women and men need the same information to learn to hunt—the skill set is the same regardless of gender." And that's the truth. There really is very little information that anyone can present to an audience of females who wish to hunt that would be different from an audience of males who want to learn to hunt.

After thinking more about this, I have come to the realization that this request is filled with good intentions and really comes from our community wanting to support women who are interested in hunting. In my case, it also positions women to receive that support and information from another woman – something that can be less intimidating and more inviting. I get that. What doesn't make sense is the belief that the information I will present will apply only to females.

There are a few differences between men and women, like size, fit and temperature rating of clothing and equipment. However, the biggest difference might just be something as mundane, but vitally important, as answering nature's call. Ladies, when it comes to popping a squat, check out the GoGirl or the SheWee.

President's Message—by Wayne Raupe

Great News... New Web-Site!!!

David Bacon, our NEW Web-Master, has the CBH/SAA Web-Site up and running now so please visit the site to check it out and get all the info you need or have been wanting. The Home Page looks much different than what you have seen in the past so if you recognize the Home Page when you open it you are looking at a stored Home Page that has been saved to your computer. So, to remove the old home page from your computer you need to use your "F5" key to refresh your browser and delete that page from your computer. Then you will be able to see the new Home Page when you go to www.cbhsaa.net or you can just type in cbhsaa and choose CBH/SAA: Home Page which is usually the very first site in the list.

This CBH/SAA Web-Site, as David has designed it, is both computer and mobile phone friendly so you can view it wherever you are on whichever device you are using. When you use your computer to bring up the Web-Site and you get to the "New" Home Page you will notice a blue menu bar at the top of the page with several different buttons you can click on to go to the areas you would like to visit. If you are using your phone you will get the same page but there is NO blue menu bar at the top. As an example, with my Android phone I get a blue bar with "CBH / SAA" and our Logo on the top then to the right of our logo I have a box with 3 horizontal line in it. By clicking on that box I get a menu page with all of the choices to choose from.

If you have problems with the site please let us know as David is a hi-tech kind of guy and he has designed this site specifically for CBH/SAA and will modify as needed. However, if your problem is not with the site but with your being tech challenged... well he can't help you with that... can't help with the purchase of your first every computer or smart phone but he can tell you how to turn it on... I know it's hard for those of us over 12 years of age, which definitely includes me, but I'm still trying to move forward. You think I'm kidding... well I'm not! Just today David asked for an original Excel file from Evan so he could do a correction on the site. So I began typing an Instant Message to Evan and got to the word Excel and... well I left my office and walked out to the kitchen and asked my wife Lori... How do you spell Excel? Is it EX-L, EXL, X-L, X-Cell or??? She looked at me, tilted her head, rolled her eyes and said... uh... try Excel! Yep I'm kinda thick at times!J

On to less humbling things... David has asked for chartered clubs and shops to contact him if they would like to have their club / shop logo listed on the web-site. David's contact info is always on the third page of our magazine for your convenience but I will also include it here 909-217-4441 and cbhsaa@outlook.com.

We are moving into the tournament season and I am again asking that the clubs and shops who are hosting a shoot, and competitors participating in those shoots, please take pictures and submit good pictures, with captions and or stories to Evan, David and me. We want more... errrr... SOME pictures of the tournament activities to publish in the CBH/SAA Magazine. Likewise you bowhunters... turkey season and bowfishing is starting to rev-up and I want some pictures with captions and or stories of your successes and failures. Make your CBH/SAA Magazine more interesting for others and also at the same time it will be an issue or issues that you have invested in.

Until next time... be safe, shoot as often as you can & enjoy this sport. Always remember, no matter what kind of stick you shoot or bow you bend, we must remain one united and strong FAMILY... or we fall!

The actual skill set, however, for hunting doesn't change. I recommend that anyone looking for some direction on how to become a hunter check out: So You Want to Become a Hunter: 10 Basic Steps to Get You Started. <http://harvestingnature.com/2015/04/06/so-you-want-to-become-a-hunter-10-basic-steps-to-get-you-started/>

As a lady, I appreciate the support from the guys and I would imagine that most women do. After all, many women learn everything they know about hunting from men, and if it weren't for them, many women would not be involved in the outdoors.

However, here is something that many ladies face that may raise some discussion. By no means does this apply as a blanket statement towards all men. But, as a female, it is true, even if we don't talk about it, that some of the guys who offer to take us into the field have rules we must abide by. Some of the unspoken rules ladies have to follow when hunting with certain guys include:

Don't be better
Don't question
Don't be tougher
Don't be more informed
Don't get dirtier
...than the guy who is helping you.

Ladies, with that...if you experience any of this, I encourage you to speak up or find a new guy to help you. As an outdoorswoman, you should always feel valued because you are part of the outdoor heritage and you are important to the continuation of our legacy.

There are more men than not, who don't feel the need to prove anything and who are genuinely there to help and promote new hunters in the outdoors. In my own experience, there have been more men who are supportive and enjoy playing the role of mentor, guide and teacher. For that, I am incredibly thankful. However, I know many ladies have not had positive experiences and as such, have refused to try hunting again.

Guys, if you ever witness another guy being threatened or intimidated by a lady hunter, please be an ally to them and say something. Both genders are incredibly important to the continuation of hunting, fishing and trapping. We need to support one another, teach one another and stand together as a community who will defend our heritage.

The next Wildlife Resources meeting was to be held May 18th in Sacramento. No agenda posted at this time. The two Commissioners sitting on this Committee have resigned. Commissioner Anthony Williams has been assigned to the Committee.

The 2016 Legislative Cycle began in January. Bills submitted last year that was granted 2 years to complete will have action or defeated. New bills can also be introduced but must be completed this year.

Bills to watch: and current positions.

AB499 Cooley, amend Fish and Game Code 4370, archery season in regards to Concealed firearms permit holders. To meet legislative deadline, AB 499 must be heard in Senate Natural Resources and Water Committee by April 22nd.

AB290 Bigelow, amend Fish and Game Code 3953, Big Game Account related to pigs. At their October 8th meeting, the California Fish and Game Commission made it clear that they have no intention at this time to make any changes to current wild pig regulations. As such, expect activity on AB 290 to ramp up immediately after the New Year. To remain viable in the second year of the two-year Session, AB 290 will have to be heard in Assembly Policy Committee by January 15th. In the meantime, Gaines & Associates is working closely with Assembly Member Bigelow and his staff this fall to address the concerns of our clients.

AB665 Frazier, amend Fish and Game Code 203.1 and add sections 200.5 & 200.6, clarifies authority to Fish and Game Commission on Hunting and Fishing. To meet legislative deadline, AB 665 must be heard in Assembly Appropriations Committee and passed to the Floor by January 22nd.

AB395 Gallagher, amend Fish and Game Code 3004.5, Lead ammunition, eliminate phase in wording. AB 395 will have to be heard in Assembly Policy Committee by January 15th to remain viable in 2016.

CBHSAA lobbyist, Bill Gaines through his special reports will keep us informed on the above bills and any that may be modified later. His Special Reports will be posted on the CBHSAA website under legislative link and distributed to legislative reps that I have email addresses for.

From the CBHSAA state meeting it was decided that CBHSAA would join Sportsmen Alliance as a participating club. From time to time articles will be included from the state director Jen Cordaro addressing sportsmen issues in California.

Thank You for your Donations to the CBHSAA Legislative Defense Fund!

By Robert Moore Legislative Coordinator

I want to thank those that have donated funds to our Legislative Defense Fund. With your donations, you're Legislative Team, representing the six DFG Regions, can attend important meetings and react to issues that are impacting our sport. We can also meet our Financial Obligations to Gaines and Associates who represent us in the state capital, at all DFG meetings, and up and down the state when and where needed. Their goals are to promote wildlife conservation and protect our archery and hunting heritage within the state political system. However, we are, and always will be, responsible for all costs over and above their obligation to us. That is, when CBH/SAA has to retain a legal team to protect us and our sport, it will be at our expense. This is why your donations are so important to the Legislative Defense Fund in any amount you can afford.

Clubs, Regions, Organizations and Businesses may show the amount of their contributions as a way to inspire others to do the same.

Again, I would like to thank those listed below in addition to those that donated previously for their support.

Did You See Our Oscars Ad? HSUS's CEO Did

Smug Wayne ran an ad (below) during the Oscars on Sunday night to continue our mission of educating people about the deceptive Humane Society of the United States, which is ripping off animal-loving Americans and shortchanging pet shelters across the nation. Our ad notes that HSUS put over $50 million in 2014 into Caribbean "investments," which is far more than it gave to help pet shelters care for animals. (HSUS runs zero pet shelters, despite its name.)

HSUS CEO Wayne Pacelle responded yesterday, claiming that the ad had backfired and that it resulted in donations to HSUS. Right. We're sure the checkbooks just flew open when HSUS was exposed for putting more money into the Caribbean than pet shelters. Wayne Pacelle isn't known for being completely honest, so we have no reason to believe what he said is anything more than trying to put spin on the fact that HSUS got socked in front of tons of people. So, Wayne: Prove it.

More likely, Wayne's whistling past the graveyard. What we have documented—using HSUS's own financial statements—is that contributions to HSUS from the general public are down by millions since we started our campaign in 2010. Why? Because of the effectiveness of our ads—during the Academy Awards, in Times Square, and elsewhere. (Our latest figures are for 2014, but we anticipate a decline in 2015 as well.)

We received a lot of positive feedback on our latest ad. So we're going to run it again—and again, and again. And if it's so effective in helping HSUS, why doesn't Wayne Pacelle write us a check to keep airing it?

Reframing Trophy Hunting

Hijacked by anti-hunters, the term 'trophy hunting' has taken on a negative connotation in society – it's time to take it back.

Contributor: Brian Lynn, Vice President Marketing and Communication, Sportsmen Alliance

When Sportsmen's Alliance President and CEO Nick Pinizzotto appeared on CNN last summer to defend hunting and hunters in the wake of the killing of "Cecil" the lion, anchor Brooke Baldwin broached the topic of trophy hunting.

Unfortunately, like many of the stories we need to relate to the non-hunting public, such as the role hunters play in conservation and in the habitat-prey-predator balance of an ecosystem, the topic of trophy hunting can't be summed up in a sound bite. Part of that is because of false connotations associated with the phrase – something the animal-rights crowd has worked hard to indoctrinate within the public (and which they've been very successful doing) – and part of the reason is that as a group, hunters often find it hard to explain the term, ultimately fighting the battle on the wrong field.

Here's a start to reframing the trophy-hunting discussion with non-hunters.

Defining a Trophy

When news anchors and the general public throw the term 'trophy hunting' around, they're usually speaking in a very broad sense that assaults their emotions and is an affront to almost everything that modern, regulated hunters and hunting represents. The term is a misnomer, but they don't even realize it.

A trophy is a very personal thing. For some just killing an animal to eat is reward enough. For others, a mature animal that is more wary is the goal. Still, for others, a very specific animal, or at least one meeting very high standards, is the ultimate goal. This is all dependent upon the person, their skill level and experience in hunting (see sidebar: "Evolution of a Hunter"), as well as understanding of the species they're targeting.

A trophy is a crowning achievement for an individual. Period.

What It's Not

The popular myth of trophy hunting is that it's simply hubristic killing by hunters for display upon a wall – which is only done for a head, hide or horns. The underlying belief is that the rest of the animal is left where it died and goes to waste.

This is the perception anti-hunters have created, and which they are framing hunters every chance they get. From the "Cecil" the lion in Zimbabwe, Africa, to the proposed black-bear hunt under protest in Florida, anti-hunting activists and organizations cry 'trophy hunt' to convey what they believe is the senseless killing of animals – without regard to the associated science, management and ecosystem-wide benefits.

It's an effective tactic that resonates with the public quickly. Those two words immediately generate an affront to the public's sensibilities, and creates another hurdle we have to overcome to maintain scientific, and not emotional, management of our flora and fauna.

What It Is

The fact is, what animal-rights' activists portray is not just an affront to the public's sensibilities, the waste of an animal is a disgrace to the sensibilities of a hunter as well. When it comes to a 'trophy hunt,' two points often overlooked by outraged activists, the media and the public include:

- 1) A hunting season is not state-sanctioned slaughter. Every state has wanton waste laws that mandate the harvest and use of meat, hides or other body parts to ensure that the animal is not just wasted, and that the number of individuals taken is in accord with the supporting habitat and predator-prey balance of the area.
- 2) A 'trophy' animal and its use as table fare are not mutually exclusive. An animal can be a specimen worthy of both taxidermy and the table.

A trophy hunter is simply someone who has placed self-imposed restrictions upon themselves that go above and beyond what's dictated by the state. They are more selective, and will pass on younger animals, often those barely reaching the minimum standard, in a deeply personal pursuit to further challenge their skills and learn as much as possible about the prey they pursue. The irony of animal-rights activists crying 'trophy hunt' is that the true definition of a trophy hunter wholly undermines their most egregious complaints about hunting. The self-imposed standards of a trophy hunter often result in the hunter not killing an animal at all, and when one is killed, it is not an 'unsuspecting' animal – it is an animal that knows how to survive and that danger lurks at every turn.

What It Doesn't Do

Contrary to animal-rights' claims, the killing of a trophy animal doesn't damage the overall population of species by removing important genes from the genetic pool or by throwing the remaining animals into a state of societal chaos.

A trophy animal is usually a very mature animal. That's what makes it so difficult to kill, and what usually results in more impressive antlers or horns, spurs and beards, or other defining trophy qualities. As such, it has reproduced many times over, likely with many different mates, for several seasons, ensuring genetic diversity throughout the population and passing along the quality genes that enhanced its chances of survival and reproduction. Additionally, the loss of a mature animal is expected in nature, and it is quickly replaced within the immediate, as well as overarching, societal hierarchy.

Trophy hunting does not damage the overall health of the population. Period.

What It Does

Trophy hunting is the most restrictive, demanding type of hunting. As such, it not only doesn't harm the overall population, it is wholly within the parameters of a scientifically managed hunt.

A trophy hunter will remove a mature animal from the population. That population has been surveyed, and scientifically determined to be able to withstand the loss of a certain percentage of both male and female animals that will result in no net harm to the overall health of the population. Additionally, the removal of the animal opens habitat and resources, such as food and cover, to others within the population.

Bottom Line

At the end of the day, a trophy hunt is a deeply personal endeavor that is in accordance with the individual hunter's goals, skill and experience level, and knowledge of the animal, its habitat and behavior.

It is not a quest simply for a head or horns, but is a severely restrictive, scientifically managed hunt for a mature animal that has served its biological purpose, and one that uses the meat, hide and other attributes of the animal to the fullest, and which supports the ecological health of the overall population into the future.

This is the message we must pass to the general, non-hunting public, regardless of whether it's an old, well-known lion killed in Africa or a record-book whitetail buck in the states.

Sidebar: Evolution of a Hunter

Shooter, limit, trophy, method, sportsman

What a hunter defines as a successful day afield changes as they age and gain experience. Their idea of what a "trophy" is changes, too. As a hunter evolves, the definition of success usually morphs from simply pulling the trigger numerous times or seeing lots of game to the fulfillment of more demanding and personal ideals. These latter stages are where hunters begin to restrict themselves more and more, to test themselves and to learn more about themselves and nature.

Shooter

This stage is all about pulling the trigger. Satisfaction is garnered from the simple opportunity to shoot – regardless of outcome. Action defines success.

Limits

While still important, simple opportunity to shoot isn't enough. This hunter wants to hit what the target and limit out or fill a tag.

Trophies

Shooting opportunity and limits take a back seat to personal goals and restrictions. A particular animal might be targeted or a set age or sex might be limiting factors of harvest.

Methods

Shooting and limits don't matter. When a hunter reaches this stage, it's all about how an animal is taken – getting intimate with its habitat and movements become the thrill. This hunter often handicaps himself by selecting weapons that require close proximity to the animal.

Sportsmen

A hunter who enjoys experiencing nature in totality – harvesting the animal becomes just part of the overall experience. Sharing knowledge and passing along the hunt to others becomes a thrill itself.
